

The Scrap Book

Enlivened the Scene.

The first night I sang Falstaff at Covent Garden, said David Bispham, Beerbohm Tree—he is now Sir Herbert, of course—helped me to make up for the part. He had played the famous role himself, and he was anxious to have my make up above reproach, for we were great friends.

"I FELT MY NOSE SLIPPING."

In those days—it was more than a dozen years ago—paper mache noses were not in use as they are today. Falstaff's huge, bulbous nose had to be built up out of "nose paste"—sticky stuff, very much like putty. If I do say it myself, my make-up was a work of art. But my costume was so heavy—I was padded out with a dozen suits and a huge stomach—so that I was perspiring copiously long before I made my first entrance. However, the applause I received when I went on made up for my discomfort, until in the midst of my most important song I felt my nose slipping from my face! I tried to put it back, but without success. In spite of everything I could do it fell to the stage in full view of the audience. A titter began in the orchestra chairs and soon grew into a roar of laughter, for in my efforts to kick the paste nose out of the way my foot slipped on the sticky stuff and I fell flat on the stage floor!—New York World.

Hassan's Proverb.

King Hassan, well beloved, was wont to say:
When aught went wrong or any project failed,
"Tomorrow, friends, will be another day."
And in that faith he slept and so prevailed.

Long live this proverb! While the world shall roll
Tomorrows fresh shall rise from out the night
And new baptize the indomitable soul
With courage for its never ending fight.

No one, I say, is conquered till he yields,
And yield he need not while, like mist from glass,
God wipes the stain of life-old battlefields
From every morning that he brings to pass.

New day, new hope, new courage—let this be,
O soul, thy cheerfulness! What's yesterday
With all its shards and wrack and grief to thee?
Forget it, then. Here lies the victor's way.

—James Buckham.

Not Guilty.

The new member of congress was enjoying the hospitality of one of the most amiable and attractive women of the capital and was doing admirably until she led him into trouble with the remark: "I am afraid you find Washington rather dull at present. There is very little excitement, excepting what you find in the way of duty at the capitol."

"It is rather monotonous," he asserted.

"No doubt you have an occasional mauvais quart d'heure?"

"No," he replied, and then, leaning over confidentially, "I haven't tasted anything stronger than tea in a year."

Indorsed by the Professor.

Before President Angell of the University of Michigan had attained to his high position a young hopeful entering college was recommended to his consideration.

"Try the boy out, professor; criticize him and tell us both what you think," the parents said.

To facilitate acquaintance the professor took the boy for a walk. After ten minutes' silence the youth ventured, "Fine day, professor."

"Yes," with a faraway look.

Ten minutes more and the young man, squirming all the time, ventured, "This is a pleasant walk, professor."

"Yes."

For another ten minutes the matriculate boled to his bones and then blurted out that he thought they might have rain.

"Yes." And this time the professor went on: "Young man, we have been walking together for half an hour, and you have said nothing which was not commonplace and stupid."

"True," answered the boy, his wrath passing his modesty, "and you indorsed every word I said."

Then they laughingly shook hands, and word went home from the professor that the boy was all right and that they were great friends.

Good Reason.

At Christmas the children of a certain English school tried to collect money by singing carols and snatches of hymns. Many complaints had reached the rector's ears of bands of youngsters scampering through the first verse of "While Shepherds Watched" and then violently ringing the doorbell. So he instituted inquiries on the next occasion he visited the school. "Why is it," he asked, "that instead of singing the hymn in a reverent way you scamper through one verse and then ring the bell?" Silence reigned for a short time. Then a shrill voice from a small boy at the back of the room was heard in explanation. "Please, sir, it's 'cause they always lets the dog loose at the second verse."

A SAVING OF TIME.

The Judge, You See, Simply Had to Get Away From Court in a Hurry. The following judicial incident, grimly humorous, is said to have taken place many years ago in Ireland at a time when rioting and disorder were getting to a serious point.

There was a Galway judge who was very fond of fox hunting and would never miss a meet if he could possibly be there. His clerk had a similar taste and never lost a chance of witnessing a hunt. One morning the clerk whispered to the judge, "Yer honor, there's a meet today at Ballykilnalligan, and they've a fine dog fox."

"How many prisoners have we?" asked the judge.

"Twenty, for rioting and breach of peace, your honor."

"Tim," said the judge, "do you think you can get the first fellow to plead guilty without a trial—me to let him off with a week in jail?"

"The easiest thing in the world!" answered the faithful clerk.

"Make haste, then, and bring the whole gang. And, I say, Tim, tell Jerry to saddle the mare meanwhile!"

The twenty prisoners were brought into court—nineteen of them prepared to fight counsel and jury to the bitter end. The twentieth had been interviewed by the clerk. "Guilty or not guilty of the crimes charged?" demanded the judge, with a propitious smile. "Guilty, yer honor," said the crafty prisoner. "Well," said the judge, glancing benevolently about the room. "I will let you off with a week's imprisonment."

The man thanked the judge and stepped down. There was a great sensation among the other defendants. None of them expected to get off with less than five years in prison. Here was a good chance to profit by the judge's pleasant mood.

"Do you all plead guilty?" demanded the judge eagerly. "We do!" shouted the enthusiastic nineteen in chorus. "Five years' penal servitude each!" exclaimed the judge. "Jerry, is the mare saddled yet?"—Exchange.

Wonder if She Could Talk?

I went into a restaurant the other day (said a very observing man) and saw a friend of mine seated at a table with a lady. She had false teeth, false hair, a glass eye and a wooden pedal. My friend says, "Let me introduce you to my wife."

I took him aside and in an undertone said: "How could you ever marry such a looking woman? I see she has false hair, false teeth and a glass eye."

He says, "Talk out, my boy; she's deaf too!"—Exchange.

Testing His Scales.

"Thank heaven, James has quit calling me Baby!" said the woman who weighs well over 200 pounds. "A strange butcher shamed him out of it. It was done unconsciously too. That is why it was so effective. Since I began to diet I have been weighed often. The other day when James was buying liver for the cat he remarked that he wished there were reliable scales in the neighborhood to weigh Baby on. "Said the butcher, 'Bring her down here.'"

HE WAS READY FOR US.

"Thanks," said James; "I will."

"James told me the butcher was expecting us, so we went. He was ready for us. He had rigged up a nice little shawl arrangement suspended from the hanging scales to put baby in, and then he was introduced to—me. James hasn't called me Baby since!"—New York Times.

Hoaxing the Latinists.

Perhaps one of the best of the numerous class of sham Latin inscriptions was that which appeared some time ago in a Dublin paper. It was in antique "Latin," as follows:

I sabyle haeres ago, fortibus es in aro. Nobile Thibae forte trux, se vaticinem—pes an dux.

This purported to have been found near the site of a church dedicated to "the saint known to the old chroniclers as Uncatus Ambulans."

The "Latin" inscription was in reality an absurd rime:

I say, Billy, here's a go!
Forty buses in a row.
No, Billy; this be forty trucks.
See vot is in 'em—peas and ducky.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer? on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" just money-back satisfactory. R. I. Schiffmann, New York, N. Y. E. B.
